

Kicking Cancer's Ass ~ Let the healing begin

"Let the healing begin" was first published under the title "Here's to Your Health" in the January 1997 issue of Active Voice. It is being incorporated into this special series on cancer and health and healing both as an introduction to topics that will be covered in future instalments, and as a reminder that the dissemination or suppression of medicinal information is not fully dependent upon or mutually exclusive to the medical establishment.

The following was written and distributed as part of my annual mass yuletide sendout. It is being published here, with a few added notes, in hopes that those who enjoy thinking for themselves will yield some positive benefits from its content.

It seems strange that politicians and leaders can steal the words of writers, as Franklin Roosevelt did of Kahlil Gibran when he uttered the line, "We have nothing to fear but fear itself," yet in so many instances it is through the actions of the protectors that fear becomes planted in the protected.

Meditate upon these words in your own solitude and you, as I, will take this truth to your physical grave:

It is not the People who so much need to be checked and watched and analyzed and controlled as it is those who would see fit to do the checking and watching and analyzing and controlling.

If in our natural, personal progressions fear must come, then let it come; but let its roots be sought and the illness be healed accordingly rather than heading false prescriptions and pitting branch against branch, and fruit against fruit, while the disingenuous roots continue to thrive underground.

It will forever be our choice as individuals and as collective bodies to love or fear, to grow or to stagnate, to flourish or to wilt, to care about and uplift others along with ourselves or to grow apathetic, selfish, ignorant and arrogant.

No one, however hard they might try, however clever and powerful and important they may deem themselves to be in their own minds, can ever take those choices away from you or me.

God Bless You and Happy New Year. Here's to Your Health.

The key word, I believe, in discussing the values and ideals and the economy of this purported free nation is not "Capitalism," as many view it to be, but rather what kind of capitalism we as a people choose to allow. Will it be capitalism through free enterprise, fair rules and honest competition? Or will it be capitalism through monopolies, subversion and deception?

On vital playing fields which are crucial to the health of every individual as well as the nation as a whole, the answer to that question has been answered all too clearly. Where Communications and Medicine are concerned in the United States, Monopoly wins out big time. And when powerful forces in Communications and Medicine team up to stomp out legitimate competition the result is the ultimate in both physical and spiritual societal destruction.

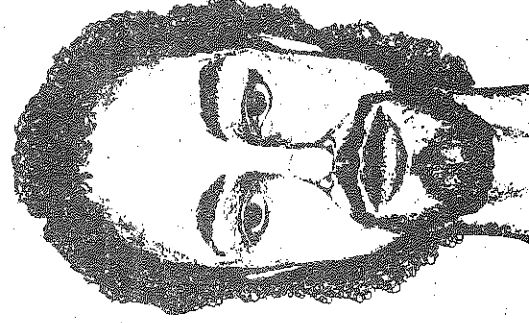

If you'd ever like to learn just a little about your own country's communications networks, check out one of the following and find out what Active Voice has been up against for the last nine years: The Media Monopoly by Ben H. Bagdikian; Adventures in Mediatland by Jeff Cohen & Norman Solomon; and Censored: The News That Didn't Make the News - And Why by Carl Jensen.

More importantly, if you or a loved one ever run into serious health problems, realize you have more options than you're hearing about from those who dominate the media and their friends in medicine.

The following is a very small list of people and places you can contact to begin your own studies on health and healing. You won't earn a degree but you might be beginning a search that could help someday save someone's life whom you love, including your own. Simply request for information and/or catalogs. 4th in a series on cancer and health and healing.

In previous segments:

Especially for those who have been told to go home and die by self-anointed omnipotent medical experts, or who have loved ones being told there is no hope to become healthy again, Active Voice Publisher Ron McEntee began his series on cancer.

"...One thing I do believe with all my heart is that fear is itself afraid of love. Fear will run from love because it will be destroyed by it. And the first step of being destroyed by cancer is to allow fear to pervade rather than love, and to allow hope to be exterminated rather than nurtured so that it can blossom and grow and bear fruit and heal..."

Part Two of "Kicking Cancer's Ass" included McEntee's emphasis on "The power within" along with a story concerning the history of Essiac called "Ojibwa Herbal Tea: Indian myth or healing remedy?"

In Part Three, "Christine's story" was told, a powerful first-person narrative detailing one teenager's bout with cancer, her subsequent victory, and her message to fellow cancer fighters.

Future segments of this series will cover past and present healers and healing methods which have been rendered subservient and unnecessary by the mainstream media and medical establishments.

Also included here will be your stories, comments and questions. Please take part and join a genuine effort to let the healing begin.

reality. We have proved that spewing statistics at them or putting someone in a wheelchair in front of them has not worked. Are we going to wait for our child to be cut out of a mangled car with the jaws of life only to see a decapitated body on the ground to show them the gruesome side of this problem?

I'm sure everyone learned in one of their many science classes that for every action there is an equal reaction. What I ask of every person is to stop, even for a minute, and attempt to comprehend the reaction that will inevitably occur when you choose the action of drinking and driving.

Step into a new pair of shoes for a moment. You have a friend, a child, driving home from the mall after a day of Christmas shopping. That person isn't doing anything wrong. They are obeying all traffic laws. This person is in a good mood and anticipating the upcoming holiday. Out of nowhere, in one quick instant, their life is shattered, along with the lives of every person close to them.

A child, not old enough to drink, barely old enough to drive, is out for a night on the town with his friends, laughing, drinking, and driving. He doesn't see the light has turned red, doesn't slow down, and blasts through the intersection at 50 miles an hour.

Imagine... the sound of metal grinding against metal. Imagine... the feeling of a two ton automobile closing in on a body, crushing bones and tearing flesh, deeming it unrecognizable. Imagine... the smell of a morgue at 2:30 in the morning after you have been rattled from a sound sleep by that phone call that you knew you would never get. Imagine... identifying the body of your loved one not by their face, but by a shredded piece of clothing, a twisted piece of jewelry, a blood-soaked shoe, or a mangled purse because there wasn't enough left of the body for you to identify.

I remember the day I sat down and looked into the eyes of a woman who was hurting. A woman who had two small grandchildren, two loved ones, ripped from her and their family because a 19-year-old child chose to drive drunk. Every time she said their names she had the biggest, proudest smile that I think I've ever seen. Yet the tears continued to flow from her eyes. All I could do was wrap my arms around this fantastic woman and try to comfort her. What do you say to someone who just lost both of her grandchildren, her entire world, and her basic will to live?

I don't know what it will take to force people to open their eyes and see some of the problems in this country, in this state, their city, or in their own backyard. I know that no one can just snap their fingers and make it all go away. But what if with every snap of these fingers the problem gets smaller, and smaller, and smaller?

MADD and SADD are more than just awareness organizations. They go beyond high school and college. They are a message for life. A message of self esteem, healthy choices and achieving goals.

Everyone can set a goal and everyone can say that they are working to fulfill a good cause. However, writing it down on a piece of paper or just saying "I support this cause" just means you have the ability to read, write and speak. But when you get out into the real world where mommy and daddy aren't there to protect you with their big plastic bubble, you might think a little differently when you have to fend for yourself and learn day by day, minute by minute. Being able to look back and honestly say that you went out, rolled up your sleeves and got your hands dirty, and truly gave all 110% of you, I can guarantee you'll get a feeling inside that's stronger than any material possession or faded New Year's resolution could ever offer you.

This problem, nor any other problem in this country, will not be easily repaired. However, there is a light at the end of this tunnel. I know it's a long way away and it's going to require hard work and an open heart to accomplish it. I'm reaching for it every day and so are the many members of MADD and SADD throughout the United States. I will continue to do so for the rest of my life. But it is not a one person task!

The following was written by a victim to anyone willing to live, feel, love, honor, and cherish. Anyone who is angry, hurt, upset, frustrated, heart-broken, and lonely. I believe in me. I believe in you. Live life to the fullest and keep this in your heart!

"A Gift" - anonymous

My brother-in-law opened the bottom drawer of my sister's bureau and lifted out a tissue-wrapped package. "This is not a slip. This is lingerie," he said. He discarded (See MADD, SADD, page 8) people who did a very terrible thing - they healed people of disease that the medical establishment couldn't cure. If you can't find any information on them and you'd like to, please contact me.

If you'd like more in-depth information pertaining to anything here, or more importantly, if you EVER feel you have no place to turn concerning accessing information dealing with health and healing of yourself or a loved one, please don't hesitate contacting me directly or writing me at P.O. Box 394, Berea, OH 44017, or calling me on my batphone at 440/243-4547, or e-mailing me at ActiveComm@aol.com (or simply collect this series in Active Voice from both prior and upcoming issues).

Considering the meaning behind the holiday season at the time of this writing maybe now would be a good time to start caring a little more about one another and caring about what's happening to this country and this world.

Addendum: For the serious readers who realize the significance in allowing ourselves every opportunity to become better acquainted with the modern world of health and healing, here are a few additional sources worthy of consideration:

Back to Eden, by Jethro Kloss, was originally published in 1939 and has been periodically re-released by descendants ever since, along with new additions and current commen-and healing. Definitely offering a view of the vaunted AMA from a most unfamiliar angle, Serpent strikes hard and deep into questions concerning health and healing, and compassion and profit.

You and I possess sole ownership of our respective bodies. That is part of the privilege, the responsibility, and the joy of being alive. No amount of certificates hanging on a wall or years spent in prestigious man-made brick edifices of higher learning gives anyone the right or the power to control your health or your mind. Who or what you believe in or disbelieve in is up to you. But in matters of health and healing, always believe in yourself. Believe in your own abilities to love and be loved, to care and to be cared for, and to search for and draw your own judgements about "the truth." Let the healing begin.

The Nature Doctor, by Dr. H.C.A. Vogel, was first published in 1952. Vogel was born in Switzerland in 1902 and went on to tour the globe in accumulating knowledge and experience in healing via natural methods. His classic book has been translated into more than 11 languages.

Serpent on the Staff: The Unhealthy Politics of the American Medical Association, by Howard Wolinsky and Tom Brune, is a tour through the world of the intellectual age's most trusted guardians of health

In restaurants and coffee shops, taverns and salons, in the workplace and school halls, the conversations go on amongst "We the People." We wonder who tells the truth anymore, who we can trust, and who performs in their profession because they care or because they seek riches and prestige. Month after month for 12 years this newspaper has been sounding the voice of "the People" like no other newspaper in existence, bringing unauditioned, unedited free and open communication. The survival of Active Voice, like the survival of the ideals and principles this country was founded on, depends upon the vigilance, intelligence, awareness and support of "the people." While Democratic Party stooges continue to hold Bill Clinton above the law and Republican Party robots continue to pretend Kenneth Starr is a hero, people at Judicial Watch (P.O. Box 96777, Washington, DC 20090) have been really investigating illegal goings-on in the nation's capital. Evidence uncovered by Judicial Watch goes well beyond the "sex and cigars" saga played out by the marionettes in high political and media circles....

An examination of "45 Current Communist Goals," submitted by an Active Voice reader and taken from decades-old Communist Party publications, may reveal that some astonishing results are being achieved right under our seepy bye noses....

Readers and neighbors and fellow citizens in Greater Cleveland and across the United States continue to share through the only publication that brings to action our inherent right to open and free communication, as acknowledged in the First Amendment to the Constitution....
