

Kicking Cancer's Ass ~ Freedom betrayed

Every morning I pick up the daily newspaper and see the headlines blaring about another giant corporate merger. Such news of consolidation in the banking and investment sectors, communications industries, health-related fields, and other facets impacting large-scale employment always comes attached with announcements of mass lay-offs and "company re-organization." Despite the billion dollar mergers and billion dollar profits, people are being sacrificed because their $50,000 a year services do not fit into the new corporate blueprint of success.

Lives are being tossed into turmoil by these "free enterprise" strategy sessions and transactions yet we are also told by headlines that never lie what a prosperous paradise we are all living in. Economic indicators and statistics conjured up by self-appointed geniuses tell us we are in heaven, so we must be. At least until the next school shooting, child molestation case, drug-related homicide, wife-beating incident or assault on an innocent elderly victim.

Everyday there is also a different Hollywood celebrity, mass-marketed athletic hero or high-connected politician making announcements and urging you to give more of your hard-earned money toward cancer research, AIDS research, heart disease research, paralysis research, Alzheimer's research, etc. And because we care, we give and we give and we give. We don't even realize we are the cancer. Or the cure.

We have allowed ourselves to become such pawns in the game of power and money that we automatically believe and we automatically give and we automatically further entrench in power those inanimate corporate and institutional entities that cause the problems we are counting on them to dissolve.

It is not a prerequisite of angels that they Especially for those who have been told to go home and die by self-appointed omnipotent medical experts, or who have loved ones being told there is no hope to become healthy again, Active Voice Publisher Ron McEntee began his series on cancer:

"... One thing I do believe with all my heart is that fear is itself afraid of love. Fear will run from love because it will be destroyed by it. And the first step of being destroyed by cancer is to allow fear to pervade rather than love, and to allow hope to be exterminated rather than nurtured so that it can blossom and grow and bear fruit and heal..."

Part Two of "Kicking Cancer's Ass" included McEntee's emphasis on "The power within" along with a story concerning the history of Essiac called "Ojibwa Herbal Tea: Indian myth or healing remedy?"

In Part Three, "Christine's story" was told, a powerful first-person narrative detailing one teenager's bout with cancer, her subsequent victory, and her message to fellow cancer fighters.

In Part Four, "Let the healing begin," McEntee re-aired his previously published reference guide, "Here's to Your Health," for those wishing to begin a wear business suits, carry briefcases or vow to care about you through million dollar campaign contests. Stop being duped and stop listening to them and begin listening to the angels in your hearts.

Think not for a minute that the primitive days and primitive ways of silencing people who bring messages of genuine love and hope and inspiration are gone. In the next chapters of this series we will be introduced to, among others, Dr. John R. Christopher, Royal Raymond Rife, and Harry Hoxsey. These men were independent of one another yet they committed a common "crime." They healed people of cancer and other "incurable" diseases without official approval of the FDA and the AMA. They were threatened, harassed and driven underground by a power structure that still thrives today.

The fact that very few of the herbal and medicinal experts I talk to have ever heard of these men is testament to the power structure's long-reaching tentacles into the communications networks in the land of the free.

If people would take the time to begin painting a picture in their own minds and hearts how foundations and medical schools interact, how politicians and campaign donors reach agreements, and how greed begets greed and eats alive the hearts of the innocent and the ignorant, perhaps a better understanding could be reached about the importance and legitimacy of this Active Voice series.

As a way of introducing the upcoming chapters in this ongoing feature, I would like to share some simple communications to offer a glimpse of my own views on the complicated mess we've allowed ourselves into regarding health and healing in this country.

The following was simply written in self-study into little publicized natural medicinal methods. Reference contacts were shared as well as an urge for people, especially in matters of health and healing, to "always believe in yourself. Believe in your own abilities to love and to be loved, to care and to be cared for, and to search for and draw your own judgements about 'the truth.'"

In previous segments:

Part Five featured "Caring about curing cancer," a response to this series from an Active Voice reader.

Part Six focused on a "miracle" herb called pau d'arco and its abilities and history of fighting cancer.

Future segments of this series will cover past and present healers and healing methods which have been rendered subservient and unnecessary by the mainstream media and medical establishments.

Also included here will be your stories, comments and questions. Please take part and join a genuine effort to let the healing begin.

response to a recent email that came from a member of a news message group I was invited to join:

In regards to a mailing I received about the Republican Convention in late July, I noticed one goal mentioned was that of "universal health care." I would just like to note that it is simple to simply "be for" "universal health care." But the issue that the powers that be, and evidently the powers that don't be seem to neglect is the ROOT of the health care problem. There is a medical monopoly that is even stronger than the media monopoly in the United States, which keeps robotic people believing their own choices and freedom pertaining to life and death situations must be put in the hands of omnipotent medical experts and lords who often do more punishing than healing. I would urge anyone interested in getting to the root of the problem to request copies of the series currently running in "Active Voice" called "Kicking Cancer's Ass." That might be a better way to empower people rather than calling for "universal health care," which only continues to put the money of hard working people into the pockets of powerful medical and political experts who do more to cause problems than they do to cure. ~ Ron McEntee

The response I received from the previous letter was met basically with the statement, "I would rather have universal health care shaped by the government, with all its problems, than no health care at all." And I sent off the following in return:

Regarding the ongoing dialogue on "universal health care," I will only add that my main concern is that people want to put this "universal health care" into the hands of the same people who are controlling the direction of the continued circumventing of the U.S. Constitution.

The issue of universal health care is bad enough when it becomes all about giving more money to the government so that the government can pretend it is protecting the innocent and helpless. What's worse is when information, which is ultimately more valuable than money, is suppressed and controlled by the government and friends in high places, such as the medical establishment and the pharmaceutical and drug industry.

If people would educate themselves and each other on how to stay well, and how to get well after they've gotten sick thanks to the usage of killer side-effect-filled addictive prescriptions, the world would be a healthier place.

Calling for government-run universal health care plans is akin to yearning for government assistance for the homeless, the destitute, the uneducated, the drug-addicted, the un-employed, and the increasingly criminal element in society, when it is government policy itself, in large part (thanks, for example, to NAFTA and GATT, which cause the seeds toward such results), which cause the problems to begin with.

"Leaders" have a clever way of creating problems that they then can step in to solve, with rationalization and with emotional displays that appeal to the shallow and lame-brained masses. Those causing the problems at the top have perfected the art of making the hard-working people of all classes believe they are bad if they do not give the government all it wants to solve the very problems it creates. The result is loss of freedom all across the board. But the people sleep.

I urge again for anyone who cares about genuine freedom of expression, genuine freedom of choices involving health care decisions, and genuine freedom itself, to request free samples of the only newspaper (See Kicking Cancer's Ass, page 8) in existence that puts all people on equal footing, without rendering anyone subservient to fake leaders, shallow celebrities, and empty heroes.

The power is within each of us and it's our choice if and how we choose to use that power. And it ultimately comes down to choosing between love or fear.

If you genuinely love people and you love the principles that you believe will bring all people the brightest opportunities of fulfilling individual and collective dreams of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, then you should have no reason to fear anything. Which means stop kissing bureaucracy ass. ~ Ron McEntee

P.S. ~ Does an email such as this one give you any hint toward the real reason why fake leaders want to have a say in the control of the internet? They're not worried about protecting children. Anyone who believes that should make an examination of this country's thriving drug operations and child pornography industry. Our "leaders" aren't worried about protecting children. They are worried about protecting those in power. They also know that the real, untapped power is in you and me and they'd rather keep that as untapped as possible. They choose fear over love. Can you see how scared I am?

One genuine healing practitioner who understood the power of love, as well as the power of herbs, in treating illness, was Dr. John R. Christopher. He operated clinics in Washington, Wyoming and Utah in the 1940s and 1950s, curing the "incurables" and improving the quality of life for those who had been stripped of hope by disease and by mainstream medical practitioners who were too brainwashed or lazy to find answers.

When, after many struggles, authorities finally forced him to quit practicing his art of healing, Christopher began teaching people how to heal themselves. He founded The School of Natural Healing in 1953, lectured across the country in as many as 120 cities in one year, and began publication of a "Natural Healing Newsletter" in 1979.

Christopher died in 1983 at the age of 73. His life and legacy and healing wisdom is passed on through his still existent school in Springville, Utah. I first became acquainted with Christopher's story and teachings through the "Save Your Life Herbal Video Collection," mentioned in previous chapters of this series. This video collection, produced by the University of Natural Healing, Inc., out of Charlottesville, Virginia, features Christopher himself lecturing and story-telling about his herbal experiences and lessons in healing.

The producers of the video series have since relocated to California. You can contact them at: P.O. Box 8122, Van Nuys, CA 91409, or call 818/503-5980. Further information about the content of the video collection as well as other offerings by the producers will appear in future chapters of this series in Active Voice.

Next month we will learn more about Dr. Christopher and how he healed people with "incurable" afflictions. For those who want to get a jumpstart on the next chapter you

In restaurants, coffee shops, taverns and salons, in the workplace and school halls, the conversations go on amongst "We the People." We wonder who tells the truth anymore, who we can trust, and who performs in their profession because they care or because they seek riches and prestige. Month after month for 13 years this newspaper has been sounding the voice of "the people" like no other newspaper in existence, bringing unauditioned, unedited free and open communication. The survival of Active Voice, like the survival of the ideals and principles this country was founded on, depends upon the vigilance, intelligence, awareness and support of "the people." Active Voice is anchored by our strongest and most cherished bedrocks of liberty, The Declaration of Independence and The Constitution, and it flows smoothly down a channel first cut by our founding fathers.

The Declaration of Independence documented the truth that all men are created equal. The Bill of Rights in our Constitution guarantees freedom of the press.

Active Voice brings those great seeds of freedom into true fruition for ALL.

can visit the The School of Natural Healing at: www.schoolofnaturalhealing.com.

You can also look for the book, An Herbal Legacy of Courage, by David Christopher, which traces John R. Christopher's story, but you will more than likely have a hard time finding it in local bookstores. Which is all the more reason I am ending this chapter with an excerpt from my own "2000 Words and Thanks" essay. It may seem confusing to some for me to be so repetitive with "this stuff." But I am thinking if songs can be drilled into your head until you are singing them in the shower and they are forced to catch on in your own mind, and if commercial and Hollywood themes become acceptable once they are hammered often and hard enough into your heads, maybe it can work also with messages of love and healing.

The words of America's founding fathers are being ignored, twisted and circumvented. From George Washington's "Farewell Address," to Patrick Henry's warnings, to the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution and the Bill of Rights, our documented cherished ideals are going by the wayside under the false leadership and ulterior motives of modern day magicians. We must not allow ourselves to be blindfolded, or blindsided, by charlatans seeking personal power, whatever the field, whatever the cause, especially in matters directly impacting life and death.

Dr. Benjamin Rush, co-signer of the Declaration of Independence and Revolutionary War hero, issued an astounding prophecy over 200 years ago: "Unless we put medical freedom into the Constitution, the time will come when medicine will organize itself into an undercover dictatorship. To restrict the art of healing to one class of men and deny equal privileges to others will constitute the Bastille of medical science. All such laws are un-American and despotic."

*Today while we sleep the medical "dictatorship" in Rush's vision thrives. In the Active Voice I am currently running a special series on health and healing and on "Kicking Cancer's Ass." Politicians and "the people" are debating loudly over health care coverage and methods and strategies involved, but no one is getting to the root of the problem. And that root is in our hearts, where fear has overtaken love, and where truth has given way to deception and people are too often putting their hopes and dreams and very lives into the hands of establishments and self-anointed gods who do more punishing than curing.*

If anyone reading this has lost hope for a loved one who is ill, or is struggling with a personal malady or that of a dear one, or if anyone reading this simply wishes to expand their own knowledge or open their minds on matters of health and healing, please contact me and I will gladly supply you with this series, FOR FREE.

Some things, to some people, are more important than money. The information in this series traces suppressed cures and histories of genuine healing. It is not made readily available by corporate dictatorships and entrenched medical establishments. And it is my pleasure to turn the worship of inanimate authority back into the hands of people, and to cut into fear and melt it down with love.

~ Ron McEntee

Active Voice Creed

In February of 1988 the idea for a genuine free press became reality and Active Voice was launched in Cleveland. Within that debut issue the following address appeared to introduce the new publication and to lend the reasoning behind the newspaper's creation. It appears again here now, and will again hereafter, to serve several functions; For new acquaintances, it is a declaration of our unwavering purpose and an invitation for your valued participation; For our growing band of perpetual readers and writers it is a thank you for proving that open minds and open hearts can openly dialogue, whether in agreement or disagreement, without closing doors, unplugging mikes or waging wars; For any lingering skeptic or confused soul it is another attempt to lift the phenomenal shroud that blinds you from understanding the ideals this nation was founded on, and what this newspaper is all about. - The Publishers

The United States of America, at its idealized best, is also the world at its idealized best. That is, men and women of all races, creeds and colors living together as equals, perhaps with differing interests and priorities, yet all sharing in the most sacred possession - freedom.

Obviously reality is still a far cry from the ideal America. Despite institutional changes that aim at giving an equal opportunity to all, many will forever brainwash themselves to believe that sex, skin color, religious beliefs and bank accounts make some better than others.

Thankfully, however, we live under a system dominated not by self-proclaimed leadership or self-appointed superiors, but by a Constitution that reaffirms the belief that the people should govern themselves and hold powers for making needed changes.

We all hold keys to participation in the selecting and criticizing of our government. These are very important, but we are empowered with other keys as well; keys that can help open new doors and bring us closer to the ideal America.

Serious problems arise, however, when opportunities for the citizenry to utilize certain keys become restricted. One such padlock that is becoming more and more difficult to open is on the channel of mass communication.

The powers of money, advancing technology and an increasing centralized mass media have joined forces to create a startling development - people are finding it harder and harder to communicate with others because there is no doorway left open; no channel left unobstructed for informal opinion, creativity and sharing.

Active Voice is Greater Cleveland's key to the padlock on communication. It's time freedom of expression by the people takes precedence over auditioning and editing sessions by media landlords.

This is a channel of communication long needed. With the help of your readership and submissions, it is a channel that will long be flowing.
